BIOGRAPHY

Prior to her appointment at Elizabeth City State University, Sheryl Bradford spent over fifteen years working with federal and state government agencies managing various environmental, microbiological and medical laboratories. Her experiences in the laboratory include hazardous waste analysis, toxicology and forensic analysis. She has served on a number of advisory committees in the area of engaging students in science, contamination site remediation, and chemical and biological transformation of contaminants in environmental systems. As Research Operations Manager she supervises overall laboratory operations, develops safety and compliance methodologies and provides scientific support to faculty members and students.
