

Logging in to the System

1. Connect your terminal to the system.
2. Type your login name, and press “Enter”
3. Type your password and press “Enter”

Changing your password

1. Type passwd, and press “Enter”
2. Type your current password, and press “Enter”
3. Type a new password, and press “Enter”
4. Type the new password again, and press “Enter”

Logging Out of the System

1. Type ctrl- D, and wait for the login: prompt.
2. On some systems, you can type logout.

Chapter 1 Quiz

1. Select the statement that best describes the purpose of an operating system:
 - A. To handle file management
 - B. To manage the operation of disk drives
 - C. To provide a shell prompt at each user’s terminal
 - D. To provide a common environment for programmers and users
2. Identify one feature from the following list that is common to both UNIX and DOS:
 - A. Commands for creating and deleting directories
 - B. Commands for text processing and editing
 - C. Commands to facilitate software development
 - D. Command to carry out all aspects of system administration
 - E.
3. True or false: Personal computers connected in a local area network can form a UNIX system.
 - A. D
 - B.
4. Which of the following organizations did not develop one of the major variations of UNIX?
 - A. AT&T
 - B. IBM
 - C. University of California, Berkeley
 - D. Microsoft Corporation
5. Which of the following is not required to log in and start using UNIX?
 - A. A Login name
 - B. A password
 - C. Knowledge of system administration
 - D. A terminal that has been set up to communicate with the host computer

6. Which of the following passwords represents a good sensible choice?
 - A. abc
 - B. dan
 - C. 2B,or .not-2B?
 - D. password

7. Which of the following commands would you use to change your password?
 - A. date
 - B. who
 - C. who am i
 - D. passwd

8. The key that you press to delete the character most recently typed on the command line is called the
 - A. "del"
 - B. Erase key
 - C. Kill key
 - D. "Enter"

9. The Key that you press the entire command line is called the
 - A. Kill key
 - B. Erase key
 - C. "Del"
 - D. "Enter"

10. What combination of key do you press to log out of the system?
 - A. QUIT
 - B. OUT
 - C. EXIT
 - D. "Ctrl-D"